

Anne A. MacKenzie
OIE representative

Dr. MacKenzie had a long career in the Public Service of the Government of Canada, working for Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada and later with the Canadian Food Inspection Agency where, as a Science Advisor, she chaired the First Food Nanotechnology Committee. Dr. MacKenzie contributed to Inspection System design and policy development, particularly in the areas of Food Inspection and Veterinary Public Health. She was also involved in international standard setting Organizations, having chaired the Codex Committee on Food Labelling for a number of years. She also served as the Editor and Coordinator of the 2005 OIE Scientific and Technical Review on the Applications of Biotechnology in Animal Health. Dr. MacKenzie currently works as a consultant in the areas of Food Safety and Animal Health.
